

Syndicated radio is a joke. It feels like there are 5 artists(? ) in rotation all of whom are pre-pubescent and selling the adolescent male fantasy. The variety of music available on XM is unparalleled and I am not constantly fed commercials asking me to buy something I don't need. XM is the example of what the NAB should strive to become. The government should not limit XM's ability to provide weather and news any more than they should prevent large radio stations from playing real artists over the age of 12 who have talent.
